

Washington Healthy Youth (WHY) Coalition

Overview

The Washington Healthy Youth (WHY) Coalition represents more than 15 state agencies and organizations.

Historically the WHY Coalition had focused exclusively on underage drinking prevention. However, in 2014 the group added focus on underage marijuana use prevention in response to the statewide legalization of marijuana/cannabis use for persons 21 and older.

The coalition focuses on:

- Promoting changes in industry policy and practices
- Educating policy makers on prevention issues and best practices
- Monitoring impacts of policy on prevention
- Supporting prevention efforts through development and distribution of educational materials and resources
- Increasing statewide education, collaboration, and partnerships to reduce youth access to alcohol and marijuana use

Coalition members share information about environmental and policy changes in schools and communities regarding minors' access to, and use of, alcohol and marijuana, especially following passage of Initiative 1183, which deregulated the sale and distribution of hard liquor and Initiative 502, which legalized recreational marijuana use. For example, in 2019 the coalition promoted prevention practices by providing feedback to the Washington State Liquor and Cannabis Board regarding marijuana packaging and labeling and the potential impact on children and youth. In 2020 and 2021, the coalition has considered data available regarding the effects of COVID-19 mandates and allowances regarding increased youth exposure to alcohol and marijuana. Additionally, in 2021, the coalition put together workgroup to look at Delta-8 and other isomers. A Fact Sheet on Delta-8 was created and the team continues to meet to review current data and trends.

Strategic action plan

In the fall of 2018, coalition members revisited the coalition's strategic action plan and outlined action items to support the group's purpose, including:

- Connect with local coalitions around the state to determine what issues they face (policy, communication, information, and activity), and how the coalition can support them in their prevention efforts
- Ensure that the WHY Coalition is represented by multiple community sectors
- Increase policy effectiveness
- Increase cannabis impairment awareness in courts, adult consumers, and legislators
- Oversee and assess use of social media promotion of cannabis and alcohol use
- Synthesize and collect data

Members agreed that the Communications Workgroup will collaborate with other agencies to continue the work set out by the State Prevention Enhancement Consortium.

The website <https://www.starttalkingnow.org/> is maintained by the WHY Coalition Communications Workgroup and is a substance use disorder prevention resource for parents and other adult influencers. The team continues to review and update the website's data including creating a proposal to redesign the site to make it more user friendly. The WHY Communications Workgroup also continues to maintain and update as needed, a prevention brochure for parents, which was recently redesigned based upon feedback from providers.

The WHY Communications Workgroup also developed a statewide community involvement campaign called the 4.20 Parent Call to Action. This social media outreach piggybacked off of the Governor's 2016 Proclamation to make April 20, "talk with your kids about not using marijuana day.” Community organizations and coalitions participated by sharing Facebook posts developed by the WHY Coalition Communications Workgroup and shared on the Start Talking Now website, and by purchasing display advertisement space on social media to spread the message of encouraging parents and guardians to talk with their children about not using marijuana. The Communications Workgroup has served as an advisory team for the Department of Health Youth Marijuana Prevention and Adult Influence campaign, the Rethinking College Drinking campaign and the DBHR Underage Drinking Prevention media campaign.

In May 2019, the Communications Workgroup at the direction of the Department of Health, and the Health Care Authority, collaborated on a contract with GMMB, a media company, to create a new website focused on youth alcohol and marijuana prevention. The Not a Moment Wasted website includes youth faced information on health and lifestyle, alcohol and marijuana as well as help and resources.
